

Lectio 02: Roma est Magna!

Naming in Ancient Rome

Roman males had three names...

1. praenōmen

- similar to our first or given name

2. nōmen

- similar to our last name
- considered a family, or clan, name
- all free-born Romans belonged to a clan.

3. cognōmen

- indicated a particular branch of the clan
- no equivalent in most Westernized cultures

Example

Marcus	Tullius	Cicero	His first daughter would be: Tullia Prima
praenōmen	nōmen	cognōmen	His first son would be: Marcus Tullius Cicero Primus

Daughters

Notice that the daughter simply has the father's nōmen, but with a feminine ending -a.

- What would be the name of Cornelia's father? _____

If a family had more than one daughter, the girls were named by birth order: Tullia Prīma (first-born), Tullia Secunda (second-born), and so on.

When the daughters married, they added their husband's nōmen as their second name.

Some Roman Names

Modern Names	Roman Origin
